Usability of small kitchen appliances

Mealtimes are made easier with a range of small kitchen appliances. But can everyone use them? Meal preparation is something most of us do every day. It's not until you can't do it that you realise how much it impacts on wellbeing, independence and quality of life. Researchers from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee worked with General Electric to develop an ...

Website cookie banners: barriers to access?

Some people think that people who are blind can't use websites or smartphones because they can't see the screen. This is not true of course because they use screen reader software to read out the content of the webpage. However, even on reasonably accessible websites, cookie banners can prevent access to the very first page. Many websites have accessible features, ...

Inclusive Autonomous Vehicle Design

Ergonomists and engineers are considering ways to design autonomous vehicles to include a diversity of users. That includes people with disability and impairments. However, it's not just a case of adding universal design principles into the design process. Designing an inclusive autonomous vehicle requires attention to many other factors. It's an interdisciplinary design process. Autonomous vehicles (AVs) present an opportunity ...

Universal design standard from Europe

Universal design is a design thinking process so a universal design standard is a contradiction in terms. Standards are fixed where universal design is a continuous improvement process. However, where designers cannot grasp the concept of an inclusive thinking process, a set of design directions is needed. Hence a new European universal design standard for products, goods and services. The ...
